

Department of Statistics

Rice University

The Department of Statistics at Rice University has an opening for the position of Lecturer of Statistics beginning Fall 2006. This is a one-year position but may be extended for multiple years. Duties for this position include undergraduate and graduate student teaching. Excellence in teaching and research is required. Teaching responsibilities may be reduced for the successful applicant who qualifies for participation in ongoing research projects within the Department of Statistics or who has secured their own external funding.

Please send letter of application, curriculum vitae and three names of references (including e-mail contact information) to:

Chair, Search Committee
Department of Statistics, MS 138
Rice University
Houston, TX 77251-1892

Please address any e-mail correspondence to stat@stat.rice.edu and include "Search Committee - Lecturer" in the subject line.

For more information regarding the position and our department see our webpage statistics.rice.edu. Applications are being reviewed and the position will remain open until filled. Rice University is an equal opportunity employer.